New to Science Leadership

a live online course for new and aspiring heads of science in secondary schools

www.astinconsulting.com

This course will help you gain confidence in leading a department - over 4 weeks you will learn strategies and techniques to go from surviving to inspiring, as well as building a network of peers.

Ideal for those recently appointed as head of science, or 2i/c, or with responsibility for a key stage within science. Also, if you aspire to be a HoS and are looking to strengthen your application, this course is for you!

The course will cover all aspects of science leadership for the 2020s: leadership and vision, teamwork, recruitment and retention, curriculum, teaching and learning, workload, quality assurance, difficult conversations and more.

- Four Thursdays in Sept, 4-5pm: 7th, 14th, 21st, 28th
- Colleagues are welcome from any type of secondary school, with any previous experience, located anywhere!
- The first 5 to book are offered a free coaching session
- A padlet will be used to share resources and ideas, and if you have to miss part of a session, we may be able to share the recordings afterwards.

Feedback from previous attendees:

"Thank you Christina for sharing your wealth of experience in what was a very well-run course."

"Having recently taken a HoS role, I enjoyed listening to Christina's and other professionals' experiences. This allowed me to prioritise the most important aspects of the role."

"As an aspiring HOD, I found this really useful to jot down ideas to think about and consider for the future."
